

AUDIO TAPE INDEX FORM

Interviewee: Leroy Remme

Interviewer: Dominic Carmona

Interview Date: 1/17/07

Summary description of tape contents:

Leroy Remme, while only sturgeon spearing for around six years, caught one of the largest fish ever recorded on Lake Winnebago in 1990. In his interview with Dominic Carmona, he talks about seeing the fish, spearing it, and the trouble it took to get the fish out of the water, out of the shanty, and into his truck. He talks about feeling bad for killing a fish that was suspected of being 100 years old. Leroy also relates some changes in the sport. Finally, Leroy ends with how quickly word spreads on the lake, and how some people like to keep trade secrets.

Brief Tape Index

| Time  | Topic   |
|-------|---|
| 00:28 | Leroy's background.   |
| 01:08 | Leroy starts sturgeon fishing in 1987.  |
| 04:35 | Leroy's fish wins Seagram's contest.  |
| 08:30 | People he fishes with.  |
| 12:01 | Sturgeon records.   |
| 13:37 | Trying to pull his 144lb sturgeon out of the hole.  |
| 15:29 | Guilt over killing a 100-year-old fish.   |
| 17:00 | Why Leroy thinks his fish was actually more than 144lbs.  |
| 18:27 | Trying to pull his 144lb sturgeon out of the hole.  |
| 20:23 | Other sturgeon he has caught. Keeping in touch with friends even though he doesn't spear anymore. |
| 26:18 | Changes in the sport. Passing time in the shanty.   |
| 29:45 | Leroy receives a plaque from Sturgeon for Tomorrow.   |
| 34:15 | Choosing and moving location. More changes in the sport.  |
| 37:32 | Trade secrets. Spread of information the lake.  |
| 41:55 | End of interview.   |